Profiles International Releases Executive's Guide to Employee Assessments

Waco, TX, November 18, 2009 – Profiles International, a global leader in employment assessments and talent management solutions, has released “The Executive’s Guide to Employee Assessments.” The report outlines different types of assessments available to executives, ways to use such assessments, and keys to selecting the right assessments for the executive’s needs.

“Our company offers such a comprehensive line of employee assessments that we thought it was important to show executives which ones are most appropriate for their businesses, as well as how to use them most effectively,” said Jim Sirbasku, co-founder and CEO of Profiles International. “We know that it can be overwhelming for executives to see just how much is available to them. This report will help them determine exactly what their needs are.”

In addition, the report outlines the purpose of employee assessments so that executives who are wondering about the necessity of assessments in their businesses can make informed decisions.

“Given the state of the economy, it has never been more important for executives to make the right hiring decision the first time instead of wasting money on advertising and training for an employee who doesn’t fit the company culture,” says Dario Priolo, Managing Director of the Profiles International Research Institute. “Organizations need to use every tool available to them in order to get the right people on their teams.”
